The Ethics of Diversity: Multicultural Counseling and the Latino Population

Mental health professionals strive to understand culture and its function in human behavior and society by recognizing the strengths that exist in all cultures. Mental health professionals should have a knowledge base of their clients' cultures and be able to demonstrate competence in the provision of services that are sensitive to clients' cultures and to differences among people and cultural groups. Competent mental health professionals need to be educated about and seek to understand the nature of cultural and social diversity and oppression with respect to all aspects of diversity including race, ethnicity and national origin. Today, Latinos are largest minority in the US; by 2050 Latinos will more than double from 14% to 29% of the US population.

The goal of this half day Ethics and Cultural Diversity Training is to better understand the special bond that exists between the Ethics and Culture. These two areas share common ground. Ethics serves as the soil in which the seed of diversity must be planted and from which our understanding of the relationship grows.

On-Site Training: can be tailored to the needs of client organization and delivered on-site at time and location of client choice.

Objective - Participants will learn:

- To identify the impact of culture on ethical conduct and compliance with ethical norms
- To manage cultural barriers to compliance with ethical norms
- To draw on shared values to sustain a commitment to ethical conduct
- To create an environment that facilitates the understanding of standards of ethical conduct within a cultural diversity context and abide by those standards
